- •Q & A

A Culture of Health

Defining population Health

- Health outcomes of a group of individuals, including the distribution of such outcomes within the group.
- Geographic populations such as communities.
- Focuses on geographic communities rather than a patient population.

Context

- •Delivery system reform efforts: incentives for hospital systems to take on more of a role in improving the health of populations in communities where they are located.
- •Business and mission are driving some hospitals to address primary prevention beyond their specific patient populations.
- •Many community-focused hospital leaders want help making complex decisions and prioritizing, implementing, and determining the success of geographically-based population health activities.

Context

- Hospitals and other institutions with deep roots in community – can play a critical role in community investment and transformation.
- Commitment to multi-sectored collaboration among key community sectors as health care, public health, community-based organizations to improve health outcomes for everyone in communities.

Robert Wood Johnson Foundation

Purpose of Coordinating Office

- Amplify Strategy: To help RWJF increase the influence of our overall strategy to enhance the role of hospitals and health systems in improving population health and addressing the social determinants
- •Monitor and Connect: To help RWJF with potential alignment across several complementary investments and highlight opportunities to accelerate influence and impact
- •Learn and share: To improve learning across multiple efforts, synthesize and disseminate lessons, especially but not only in service to RWJF's efforts

The Coordinating Center is NOT

- Is not a National Program Office or National Center
- Is not expected to manage other grantees' efforts
- Will not be charged with new programmatic work
